"These meetings are intended to introduce families to the upcoming changes to the Autism Spectrum Disorder Waiver and to explain how families can participate in the process," said JoAnne Hoesel, director of the department's Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services Division. "Collaboration is important, and we want parents to be informed."

Hoesel said these meetings will be followed by the formal public comment period on the waiver amendments and a tribal notification process in early 2014 followed by a federal review and approval process by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. The amended waiver is expected to be implemented in June 2014.

Waivers allow states to develop Medicaid-funded programs that differ from the standard Medicaid program.
