Why student-centered coaching?

“Research has shown, traditional forms of professional development are not effective, usually getting no better than 10% implementation rate. However, when teachers receive an appropriate amount of support for professional learning, more than 90% of them embrace and implement programs that improve students’ experiences in the classroom.”

Confidentiality and Professional Ethics

“Coaching is never about making evaluative decisions about professional competence. Coaching is about the well-being of students, not judging or evaluating teachers. Coaches collaborate with teachers to help them provide the best possible instruction to every student, at every skill level.”
