

What We Do

Commissioner Jon Godfread

The mission of the North Dakota Insurance Department is to protect the public good by fairly and effectively administering the laws of our great state. As your Commissioner, my greatest concern lies with you, the consumer. My job is to make sure consumers know where to find critical information and that the Department is always available for contact when questions arise. It is also my job to make sure producers are aware of the laws by which they are to operate. Therein lies the duality of both my role as the Commissioner and the Department's responsibility to all North Dakotans.

Unfortunately, insurance is not something that most people think about until they need it. This is just one reason why it is so critical that consumers know they can reach out to the Department with their questions and concerns. Our logo reads "North Dakota Insurance Department – Protecting the Public Good." This statement following the Department's name is much more than just a nice sentiment, it's our promise to you that we will be a reliable resource while always striving to provide the best customer service possible.

It is my goal that the Department remain a transparent and approachable state agency always keeping those we serve in mind. In the future, the Department will work to provide more education to our consumers about the insurance industry and the variety of services we offer.
