Questions and Answers

1. Among the items included in the scope of work is “Service Descriptions – finalize service descriptions for …” We have found an “overview” document as well as the 191(c) waiver that contain service descriptions on the Division’s website. Are there other documents that contain the service descriptions or drafts of service descriptions that are to be finalized? If so, can they be made available?

   A. Please see Attachment D, Developmental Disabilities Services, for this information.

2. Also included in the scope of work is a revision to the purchase of service agreement. Is there an example of a purchase of service agreement that can be reviewed?

   A. Please see Attachment E, Purchase of Service Agreement, for this information.

3. The scope of work indicates that a provider manual is to be developed. Does the Division currently have a provider manual that can be reviewed? We could not locate one on the Division’s website.

   A. At this time, the STATE does not have an all-inclusive handbook for providers that identify, for example, licensing, billing, and auditing requirements. Below are links to two documents that may provide some information to what we are asking the successful offeror to complete. However, these documents do not include the components of the new payment system, which the new handbook will need to do so.

4. The scope of work uses the phrase “must be ready for STATE review by [date]” in several places. In using this phrase, is the intent that a “working draft” or a finalized document be presented to the state by the various specified dates? Restated, are the documents to be delivered by the dates to be the beginning or the finalized product of discussions between the contractor and the state for each of the specified documents?

   A. The statement “this task must be ready for STATE review by [date]” means a working draft must be submitted to the STATE by that date. Once the STATE has reviewed and made any changes, the successful offeror will have 30 days to deliver the final product.
5. We could not find on the Division’s website either a final report or a set of models that were developed for the new payment system. We understand there were public hearings on the new payment system in June of 2013. Does the Division have any descriptive or quantitative materials that describe the new payment system that can be shared with the offerers?

A. The STATE received an Interim Report in December 2012 (Attachment F) and a Final Report in June 2013 (Attachment G).
