Student Panel

A group of 10 high school and college students from North Dakota and South Dakota took part in a panel discussion during the second annual North Dakota Indian Education summit meeting July 7-8 at the state Capitol in Bismarck. The students spoke about the importance of supportive teachers who worked with them on lessons, and called to check on them when they were absent. Some spoke about the difficulties they had in school, and suggested ways to improve school instruction. The students said they wanted to pursue higher education, and be positive examples for others.
