CHILD SUPPORT AUTOPAY TERMS AND CONDITIONS

To qualify for autopay, you must have a good payment history which means you have paid your child support (current and past due support) in full:

- Every month since your order was effective if your order is less than 9 months old.
- The last 9 months if your employer is withholding support and sending payments to Child Support.
- The last 12 months if you do not have an income withholding (ex: 1099 or self-employed)

NOTE: The month you apply for autopay, the current months support must be paid in full before your application will be considered.

Child Support will deduct your current and past due support (if owed) from the checking or savings account you have authorized. The deduction will be on or around the 5th day of each month regardless of the actual due date provided in your support order.

- Past due support is an additional 20% of the court ordered support amount or at a dollar-specific amount ordered by the court.

The autopay process is for all your cases.

The autopay amount can increase or decrease if your child support amount changes or past due support is paid in full. You will not be notified of changes to the autopay amount.

If you owe past due support when your child support order ends, the autopay amount will not change until the balance is paid in full.

When autopay is approved, Child Support will terminate any income withholding orders in effect.

If there is an overlap in payments received during the transition from income withholding to autopay, and you owe past due support, the extra payment(s) will be applied to your past due support.

If you currently receive billing statements from Child Support, you will no longer receive them when autopay is in effect.

You can stop autopay at any time by mailing a letter or sending an email to Child Support. An income withholding order will then be sent to your employer.

Failure to comply with the Terms and Conditions of autopay could result in your removal from autopay. Upon removal, an income withholding order will be issued to your employer.
