Lewis says a lot of the plants feature a QR code with information about that plant.

Because of some of the features the park offers, it’s designed for visually impaired to experience the trail unassisted.

Lewis added that all five senses were addressed.

The garden joins over 200 Braille trails and sounds.

“We are grateful that we could collaborate with our employees, Freedom Resources and several individuals who航道ed this,” Lewis said. “We are hopeful that everyone will be able to enjoy it.”

Other Sensory Garden Committee members include Erik Laber, Jamestown City Forester.

The garden is located at Solie-Denault Park at 100 18th Ave NE in Jamestown.
